About the SVA

Started as a small, regional initiative responding to the dramatic loss of the steel industry impacting Pittsburgh and the Mon Valley, the Steel Valley Authority (SVA) has evolved into a nationally acclaimed leader in layoff aversion.

SVA drives both new economic policy and innovative programs to effectively save and create manufacturing jobs across the United States.

For 40 years, the SVA has contributed to stable communities by saving more than 35,000 productive economy jobs. SVA supports workers and their families, small manufacturers, and communities through a number of initiatives.

Saving Jobs

The Strategic Early Warning Network (SEWN) saves Pennsylvania jobs and communities by offering layoff aversion services to stabilize, restructure, turn around, or attract buyers for at-risk small to medium sized companies.

Investing Responsibly

Heartland Capital Strategies advances renewed prosperity by stewarding responsible investments in sustainable domestic manufacturing and community development through education, research and policy advocacy.

Sustainable Communities

The Appalachian Sustainable Finance Hub will serve as a central point to facilitate the planning and funding of projects. By working with local leaders, industry partners, labor, and investors, it aims to prepare communities to secure millions in grants and project funding.
